Senior Care Management

How do you know when it's time for extra help?

When considering whether or not the services of a professional care manager would be a good choice for a particular situation, consider the following questions:

- Yes  No Are your elderly family member's needs becoming more complex?
- Yes  No Is there a need for services that family and friends may lack the time, skills, or willingness to provide for the senior?
- Yes  No Do the care requirements interfere with your job and work schedule?
- Yes  No Do you face difficulties in organizing and attending medical appointments with your elderly family member?
- Yes  No Do you encounter challenges with individuals involved in your family member's care with whom you feel uncomfortable?
- Yes  No Are you worried about a senior who may be at risk for issues such as unsafe driving, medication mismanagement, elder abuse, falls, malnutrition, depression, social isolation, chronic pain, and/or cognitive decline?
- Yes  No Is there conflict within the family regarding the senior's care?
- Yes  No Does your family reside out of town, making it challenging to coordinate care?
- Yes  No Has the senior recently received a new diagnosis?
- Yes  No Is the senior going through a transition from hospital to home or to a different living arrangement?

If you answered "Yes" to three or more of the above questions, a professional care manager will be beneficial for the situation.
